After a long career as a New York photographer, I taught middle school English in the South Bronx as New York City Teaching Fellow for two years, then went to the Federal Emergency Management Agency as a photographer and a public information officer. In the past six years, I have worked in fourteen states on twenty nine Presidentially declared disasters, and I expect to continue working as long as I want to live indoors.

My wife, Janet, is also a photographer in New York, and my daughter, Emily, just graduated from Hampshire College in Amherst, Massachusetts. We have moved to an old Victorian house in Kingston (near Woodstock, for you history buffs), and we keep my old apartment in the Village. It is strange living in a house after all these years, but finally I have a garage for my motorcycles. Two years ago, I was on my way to the 70th anniversary of the St. John's Episcopal Church Boys Choir on my motorcycle when I hit a deer just past Port Huron. The motorcycle was totaled, the deer was killed and I spent six hours in the hospital in Harbor Beach. When I was released, I rented a car and carried on, making it to the reunion on schedule, beaten but unbowed.

at Hampshire College, May.
